

PHILIPPINE TRADITIONAL GAMES

PATINTERO (block the enemy game)

- There are two sets of this game: One requires six players to a team while the other needs eight players.
- The game is played outdoor at any time of the day and at night when the moon is out.
- The game is prepared on the ground by drawing a rectangular field (usually five to six meters with four parallel lines inside) using either water, stick and charcoal on the ground to define the boundary.
- To play, one set of taggers or the 'IT' situates themselves inside the lines of the rectangle while the RUNNERS will try to get through both ends of the field and back without being tagged or blocked.
- When caught, they right away change roles.
- The group that has LESSER TAGGED INCIDENTS IS DECLARED WINNER.

PIKO (hopscotch)

- The players are required to complete the course by hopping through numbered spaces.
- Players throw their marker (pamato) into specific boxes and hop through the course, entirely skipping the square occupied by the marker.
- Stepping on a grid line, losing balance, or putting both feet down (when not allowed) results in a turn loss.
- By completing the course without mistakes, players are rewarded with the opportunity to claim an unowned box as their own, which other players must then skip over for the remainder of the game.
- The game ends when all boxes are claimed, and the PLAYER WITH THE MOST "HOUSES" WINS

PALO SEBO (climbing a greased bamboo contest)

- It traces its origins to a similar game widely played in the Visayas that had men racing up a greased BAMBOO pole.
- It is also similar to the 'PINANG' game of Java, Indonesia.
- The game is played by young males and generally done in an open space during fiestas and other celebrations.
- A long-polished bamboo pole greased with oil is planted on the ground with the prize placed at the topmost of the pole.

- All players, whether individually or as a team, try to climb the pole for the prize. The prize, usually cash, is increased depending on the sponsor's generosity.
- The objective of the game is TO CLIMB THE SLIPPERY POLE AND RETRIEVE A FLAG OR PRIZE AT THE TOP.
- TAKE NOTE: A COMPETITOR IS GIVEN ONLY ONE CHANCE TO CLIMB. ANYONE WHO FAILS TO REACH THE TOP IS DISQUALIFIED OR AUTOMATICALLY LOST.

SUNGKA OR CHONGCA, SUNGCA, SUNKAN, SUNCA, TSUNKA (board game)

- This is another set of game widely distributed in the country and the rest of Southeast Asia.
- This game is played both outdoors and indoors and is played by both children and adults.
- This is played by two players with a wooden pea-pod shaped board with SEVEN SMALL HOLES in rows on each side, and a big hole on each end filled with an equal number of 'SIGAYS' (small shells).
- Each player takes turns picking up from any hole on his/her side, putting one 'sigays' in the small/big hole to his/her left, then picks up all the 'sigays' from the last hole that the last sigay is put and places them in the big hole to his/her left.
- This is repeated until one person no longer has any 'sigays' to play with and is declared the loser.
- THE PERSON WITH THE GREATEST NUMBER OF SIGAYS IS DECLARED THE WINNER.

PUKPOK PALAYOK OR HAMPAS-PALAYOK

- It is a fun game played during Filipino fiestas and traditional parties.
- The Tagalog words hampas and pukpok mean 'to hit'.
- A traditional earthen pot called a *palayok is filled with goodies (wrapped candies, money coin) and suspended in the air.
- A player is blindfolded and then spun around to disorient him.
- A stick is put in his hand and he is told to walk in a straight line towards where the pot is hanging and try to hit it.
- The crowd shouts out instructions at him. "Go straight, to the left, to the right, stop!"
- He gets one attempt to hit it hard enough to break. If he doesn't break the pot, another guest at the party gets his turn.
- If he breaks it, it's a free-for-all and everyone in the crowd goes for the goodies.
